ROSE HILL PLANTATION STATE HISTORIC SITE

This State Historic Site interprets the family life and political legacy of William Henry Gist, often called South Carolina's "Secession Governor," serving from 1858-1860. With its mix of Georgian and Greek Revival style architecture, the former family mansion stands as a fine example of an antebellum home.

The site offers the opportunity to examine a large 1800s cotton plantation and learn about the lives of enslaved African-Americans who labored there. Today, visitors can take guided tours of the home, walk the historic grounds, admire its beautiful rose gardens and explore the property's 44 acres. The grounds may be rented for weddings and other special occasions.
