This landscape painting workshop is for advanced-beginner, intermediate and advanced painters working in oil. It's designed to meet the students where they are at and move them to the next level. Through hands-on exercises, demonstrations and participant painting, we'll work on strategies that take some of the guesswork out of painting. We'll start with developing strong compositions and designs, then move on to establishing compelling value patterns and lush color masses. We'll work on painting wet-into-wet without dulling the colors, and finishing a painting in an afternoon using painting knives to speed up that process. Participants will be encouraged to work quickly and produce at least two paintings during the workshop. The three days of instruction include demos, short exercises, gentle group critiques and, with a very limited enrollment, plenty of personal attention from the instructor. Please call the park for reservations.
